

2022-2023 Impact Report

Foreword

2022 has been both an exciting and challenging year for Thrive. We are very proud that our previous hard work has come to fruition with the launch of the RAPID project and a significant increase and diversification in our accommodation-based services. All of this has been in the midst of a housing and cost of living crisis. This has resulted in women experiencing multiple challenges and disadvantage, which have had a significant impact on their lives and the way in which we deliver support.

Post-pandemic partnerships have been an integral part of our work this year. We have demonstrated this through formal partnerships with South Wales Police and informed networks with our colleagues across the sector.

With the launch of Thrive Housing we have commenced the journey of purchasing 20 local properties to enable us to deliver services to meet individual needs and to provide survivors of domestic abuse with safe homes.

Looking to the future, with a new CEO at the helm of the organisation, we are committed to delivering the objectives of the 2021 – 2026 strategic plan whilst ensuring our values are at the forefront of our operations.

We will continue to deliver person-centred services and take a holistic approach to capturing the impact of our work. This will be through analysing its effectiveness and constantly making improvements where needed to meet the changing needs of families and communities.

This report outlines the considerable impact we have had and will highlight the progress we're making. We remain dedicated to taking meaningful action which enable individuals and families to thrive.

Thrive RISE Awards

As well as supporting survivors through their experience with domestic abuse, the staff members at Thrive provide tremendous support to each other when working in what can often be distressing situations.

Every month during our team meeting, staff members at Thrive hold the RISE Awards to recognise colleagues who embody the values and behaviours of our organisation.

Working closely with Seren has assisted me in gaining knowledge, understanding and patience. She is so dedicated to the women she supports and is an inspiration to others. She has worked hard to engage service users into the Housing First project and will do her utmost to ensure their safety. Seren uses her intuition when something doesn't feel right and no matter how chaotic the situation, there is no judgement from her, this ensures a trusting relationship is built.

Community and Outreach

In 2022/23 we supported 454 women who had experienced domestic abuse or who were seeking support to transition away from abuse. This was an 8% increase on the previous year.

Out of these women we have supported:

- 210 women with housing, family court and criminal justice issues. This is a 5% increase on the previous year and the also reflects the increase in complex situations that survivors are experiencing.
- 356 women received support with emotional health and well-being including accessing support in relation to children and parenting, drugs and alcohol, mental and physical health, grant funding, sexual health, community relationships, accessing education, work and training, counselling and signposting to other agencies.

The support I have received from the C&O team at Thrive has shown me how to believe in myself again and trust in my intuition. You guided me through - from breaking down and sinking into not wanting to exist anymore - to rebuilding myself, as a mother and a better version of myself. I've grown wiser and stronger by enabling myself to reach out and being OK with not being OK. I always knew you had my back, and for that I will be forever thankful.

Case Study - Thrive Crisis Service

A survivor contacted us with concerns that she was experiencing stalking and harassment from her ex-partner. She was extremely frightened and did not know what to do or indeed if there was anything that could be done. Her ex-partner was constantly emailing, texting and calling her and was turning up at her home un-invited and leaving her gifts. Her case was assessed as high risk and she was referred to the Crisis support officer.

During support, her ex-partner's behaviours escalated and he was contacting her from over 50 different mobile phone numbers obtained via the internet, sent her over 1,500 emails and went to the extreme of impersonating professionals in order to have phone contact with her which was extremely concerning.

The Crisis officer worked closely with South Wales Police and MARAC as well as supporting her to access legal representation. As a result, her ex-partner was arrested and on release received strict bail conditions whilst the case was presented to the CPS for a charging decision. Following this, via the Public Protection Unit, the service user has obtained a Stalking Protection Order which is one of the first in South Wales to be issued.

Counselling

This year through additional funding we've been able to maximise our therapeutic counselling at a time where women need it the most.

Out of the 44 women that received counselling throughout 2022/2023:

- 100% report that attending therapeutic sessions helped them to recognise abusive behaviour
- 85% report increased confidence and self-esteem
- 95% feel better informed, and empowered to act to address issues in the future

100% of women found that the counsellor was approachable and took the time to listen

“

Counselling's been amazing, it took me a few sessions to actually open up about my feelings but that was due to my own fears, it has been a massive help to me.

- Counselling Client ”

Case Study: Counselling

Client A made the decision to access counselling having previously received support from within our internal projects throughout the process of ending her relationship with an abusive partner. She reported having felt trapped in the relationship and had not expected to continue to feel trapped after it had ended. The client said that this had left her feeling angry, confused and frustrated, left with raising her young family alone, feeling that she lost herself. The main focus of the work we undertook together was to address feelings of anger toward her ex-partner and that she had held toward herself. The client said that she had felt frightened of how powerful it felt that it scared her and so had been trying to suppress them out of shame for feeling them.

We explored reframing anger as our 'fight response' that we can be taught from a young age that it would be wrong to express. Over the course of our sessions, the client said that in reframing in this way it became less frightening and less shameful to feel.

Instead, the client focused upon using the energy it generated for strength, courage and for self-compassion.

The client reports that in having a safe therapeutic space she had begun to feel able to trust that she could freely express her emotions thoughts, and feelings without judgement. The client decided to write a letter to her ex-partner with no holds barred, for her eyes only, which the client said she found helpful in releasing her feelings in a safe way.

The client said that a feeling of sadness had emerged and that she gave herself permission to begin to grieve the loss of her hopes and plans for their future together. The client was open and willing to gently challenge her belief that she had 'allowed' herself to be controlled, and her perception that this was what her life would always be like. Through the counselling she saw new possibilities were beginning to emerge. and towards the end of her sessions, the client said that she had noticed she had more energy and the courage to join a group for mums that she said helps her to begin to feel a part of a normal life again.

Equality Diversity enGagement and Education (EDGE)

EDGE supports women who have experienced domestic abuse and are in marginalised groups such as women who are disabled, from ethnic minorities, are older women or who are part of the Gypsy, Roma or Irish Traveller community.

The EDGE project also delivers training and awareness raising amongst professionals, organisations and communities. This training helps to raise awareness of the barriers that victims/survivors of domestic abuse and minority groups experience when accessing services and support them to make active changes to address these.

25 Women benefitted from EDGE this year

- 72% of the women referred to EDGE had a disability
- 8% of the women benefitting from the EDGE project were older
- 16% of the women using the EDGE services were from ethnic minorities

I thought domestic abuse means that you get physically abused. Until I walked into the doors of Thrive and understood the real meaning of domestic abuse and that was when I realised that I was actually a victim. I was abused mentally, emotionally and physically, I lost myself along the way I didn't know who I was. Without the support of Thrive especially my support worker, Hollie, I wouldn't have recognised all the signs of control and all the other things in the abuse. I wouldn't be in a better place mentally right now if it wasn't for Hollie!

Refuge Story: told by support worker, Sarah

At refuge, we have supported a women who had originally fled from Sudan to Wales. She had no money, no bank account and no access to health care or support. The survivor was a victim of Female Genital Mutilation and Domestic Abuse. Despite language barriers we all worked hard to ensure that we could support her to overcome the difficulties with her emotional and physical health issues that she'd experienced in her life.

In time, the survivor had learnt to communicate with staff and residents and we'd giggle together about English slang words that she would tell us about, such as Oh my god! The survivor had a new found confidence, from coming into refuge completely isolated to attending local library groups and taking college courses. She made new friends with local women with similar experiences and loved nothing more than to have a chat with staff at the end of the day.

She is now looking forward to the future, she says that we have helped and taught her so much, but in reality, we have learnt far more about life than she could realise.

Thrive Housing

Thrive housing provides survivors of domestic abuse and their families with a home, maintaining their own tenancy, emotional and well-being support as well as support to be integrated into a new community.

We assist in providing safety plans and measures in order for them to continue on their new, independent journey of recovery. Due to the varying needs of the victims, support can look very different from tenant to tenant.

We have completed work on 5 properties so far and 4 of them are tenanted. We have an additional 4 properties in conveyancing so that leaves us with 11 properties left to buy as we committed to purchasing 20 properties by March 2024.

“ By providing me with safe and supported accommodation, Thrive have provided me with the 1st step towards getting my children back

RAPID (Rapid Domestic Abuse Intervention Project)

This year, we launched our RAPID project, which is a 5-year partnership between Thrive Women's Aid and South Wales Police, aiming to increase education and awareness of domestic abuse, coercive control, stalking and harassment for Police Officers as well as enhancing safety for victims.

100 police personnel trained

The RAPID project aims to improve victim experience following an incident of domestic abuse, coercive control, stalking and harassment. This results in increased confidence to report and ensures that the voice of survivors being heard and listened to. This enables approaches to tackling domestic abuse, coercive control, stalking and harassment to be enhanced and transformed.

We would like to sincerely thank The National Lottery Community Fund for investing in this vital work.

Case Study - CLEAR Integrated Support

John & I met at school when we were both 15 in 1985. We moved in together after 6 brilliant years. It was then that I became victim to my first domestic attack. These have continued periodically throughout our relationship both mental and physical. Sparked by early use of drugs and years of alcohol consumption, the attacks were random yet severe and John became more narcissistic over time. This had a devastating effect on my mental health.

In May 2022 whilst on holiday I was physically attacked by John and subsequently decided to share my secret and speak to someone. That came in the form of Thrive!! Upon returning home we decided to abstain from alcohol as this was found to be the root cause in our situation.

During my first meeting with my support worker Leanne, it became apparent that I needed protection away from John and measures were put in place swiftly for my safety. John was placed on the Marac register and I left the family home. Leanne acted as my voice during meetings and was in contact with me very regularly checking on my well-being and offering any updates or advice if I asked for it. She was always just a call away. A place was offered to John on the Drive programme (which he accepted) and if I'm honest it was amazing. Leanne collaborated with Drive and together ensured that both programs worked. John responded so well to the programme that he was removed from the Marac register and I returned to the family home. We have worked with and been monitored by both professional parties throughout to ensure that everything is safe and working well.

Throughout this, Leanne has been my constant support. Without Thrive I would have had no one and nowhere to turn when I needed it most. I cannot thank the teams enough. I understand that my outcome is different to most, however the support I needed was just the same. I think this service has a vital role to play. Cannot think where I would be without it
